BROTHER BIDES TIME FOR REVENGE

To see a male form, clad only in this underclothing, squat the back fence. One shot he took at the flying figure and then silently he entered his wife's room.

On the floor and on chairs were scattered a man's wearing apparel. Inspection proved them to belong to Charles Thomas. They did not find Beauchamp's gun. They did not find Beauchamp's gun. They did not find Beauchamp's gun.

Beauchamp then called his wife and told her she must go. She stayed until morning and departed for her old home in Angaria, Tex. The doctor soon after moved for divorce and custody of his three children and was given it.

Several months elapsed. Mrs. Beauchamp lived in Texas and Thomas had disappeared. But the mother love predominated in the woman and she longed to see her children. Finally she wrote to her former husband and asked for a reconciliation.

He consented to an interview and a year later his dream of love had been rudely awakened by the form of an addressed man from his wife's bed chamber. Dr. Beauchamp, his former wife and her mother met in a hotel room.

She glided on her knees to be allowed to live with her children and her pleadings won. Shortly after Dr. Beauchamp went to Texas and they were married. When they returned to Oklahoma they moved to Lawton. All went well after this until February 15, 1927, when fate led Dr. Beauchamp to board a train at Hobart and come face to face with Charles Thomas in a crowded chair car.

Neither spoke but both reached for their guns. It was a play of death and the quickest man won. Whether by chance or because his side was right, Dr. Beauchamp drew first and his shot pierced Thomas' heart. Twice more the doctor fired before Thomas fell and each time inflicted a fatal wound.

He stepped from the train and calmly awaited officers to arrest him. He was in a daze and did not know what he had done.

William Thomas and John Thomas attended the doctor's trial and found out his conviction. They claimed that Dr. Beauchamp was guilty of their brother's murder and should pay the penalty.

For the past year John Thomas and Dr. Beauchamp have lived peacefully in the same town. William Thomas came from Texas a week ago to visit his brother.

John Thomas has been prominent in the Democratic party. He was once a member of the Texas house of representatives and has served as congressman from the fifth congressional district of Oklahoma. William Thomas is a telegraph operator in Chicago, Texas.

THE LAND OF THE LONG NIGHT. (Dedicated to Charles Taylor by P. P. DUFFY.) See you restless mortal groping through a darkened sphere. The windows of his soul admit no rays. Of sunshine far to make the beauties of the world appear. Radiant and resplendent to the gaze. He cannot see the twinkling of the stars at night. Captain's dreams and flights of gnat-like light. Forest of Nature's scenery central he must abide. In a land of long, continuous night. Men should more appreciate the gift of perfect health. In functions of the body and the mind. And remember while there's striving in the field of worldly wealth. Don't trample on the weak of human kind. Aid a distressed brother as he stumbles down life's way. God—man should pity him and help him. Help him feel the glorious sun that shines for us each day. As we journey through eternal night.

HEARD IN THE SENATE CLOAKROOM.

Wednesday afternoon was a good day for the "cloak room" the senate having tedious matters before it for consideration, that were not general in importance, giving idle time to those senators not interested in the floor work.

Russell told a story that counts. Said the senator: "A young man who knew less than required by law, and about to marry, and a friend asked him if he could support a wife. 'Well,' drawled the applicant, 'I can almost make a living myself, and it seems like the girl might help some.'" time, for Davis has an election bill before the senate, longer than the law of the Medes and Persians. When referred to committee Johnston sent it to the committee on prohibition enforcement, and Davis had to request that it be sent back, adding the prohibition committee had all it could attend to. But the facts are Billings is having some enjoyment from those who were free when his measure was up for consideration, and the Cordell man gets a "hand" because he entered all that was poked at his bill when on the carpet.

"Ticks are bad," said Russell, discussing the agricultural board, and Little wanted to know how bad.

When Johnston was scoring Mathews for being a "watch dog" of the treasury, Updegraff was writing "Why don't you listen to them, asked a visitor. 'Oh, one wants to spend the money and the other wants to save it and they will do as we vote,' was the laconic response of the cattle statesman from the north part of the state."

Some "joker" put a rider on the report of the committee on legislative affairs, the same being read at the close of the session, Wednesday. It provided for the payment of salary to Robt. Davis and Franklin during the holiday season, and before those sentences could utterance the prohibition was a joker, each asked his name taken off, when Robt. was asked that he be placed on the roll for each senator who was too modest to accept. Johnston ruled the joker to the wastebasket grave, and all was peace.
